Indigenous elders reject Pope's 'apology', vow to arrest him if he comes to Canada and seize church property; Protests will also disrupt Pope's meeting with Chinese in Prince Rupert

A Breaking News Report by the Stop the Pope Coalition

Ottawa:

In a public statement issued today, traditional elders of the Squamish, Tsilhqot'in, Anishinaabe, Mohawk, Inuit, and Cree indigenous nations rejected Pope Francis' upcoming "apology" for crimes at Catholic 'Indian Residential Schools', and vowed to arrest him if he comes to Canada.

"Words don't undo genocide or absolve the guilty," the statement reads.

"As head officer of the church that led the planned extermination of over 60,000 of our children, Pope Francis bears legal and moral responsibility for that ongoing Crime against Humanity, and he stands guilty as charged."

The elders also issued a Banishment Order against the Roman Catholic Church on their territories, and declared their intention to seize church lands and property as reparations for genocide and the theft of their lands and resources.

(See the attached declaration of the Tsilhqot'in/Chilcotin National Congress)

The elders' statement was accompanied by the launching of a nation-wide "Stop the Pope Coalition", that will stage protests, church occupations, and civil disobedience actions across Canada before and during the papal visit between July 24-30, 2022.

The Coalition, which is endorsed by the same indigenous elders, has pledged to help arrest Pope Francis (Jorge Bergoglio) and seize church properties. It also plans to disrupt a meeting between the Pope and Chinese officials scheduled in Prince Rupert, B.C. during the last week in July.

According to Coalition spokesman Kevin Annett,

“It’s no accident that Bergoglio will be passing through the Highway of Tears, where so many native people are killed to allow China to grab their resources. Bergoglio’s ‘apology’ charade is a camouflage for genocide by his business partners in Beijing, who are underwritten by the Vatican Bank.”

The Stop the Pope Coalition will conduct public and online teach-ins and training workshops for its members, and will launch actions during June.
